Venice, Octob. 9.

THIS advis'd from Crema and Breſcia, that the Imperialiſts have made themſelves Maſters by Capitulation of the Caſtle of Pavia, the Garriſon being to be conducted to Suza. The Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene advanc'd from thence to Lodi, which they found abandon'd, and put 500 Men into it. After that, they paſs'd the Adda, and march'd in 2 Columns towards Pizzighitone, which they caus'd to be ſummon'd to ſurrender; but the Governour anſwer'd he was reſolv'd to defend himſelf to the laſt Extremity. Thereupon they continued their March towards Cremona, hoping the People would favour their Enterprize, but none have ſtirr'd for them, and the Place is defended by the Marquis de Toralba Lieutenant General, with 5000 Men regular Troops. Count Medavi is march'd towards the Seraglio, to oppoſe the Paſſage of the Troops commanded by the Prince of Heſſe who is in the Modeneze, and has demanded of the Town of Bologna, Proviſions, Forrage, and 12000 Piſtoles.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated Nov. 2.

The Continuation of the Journal kept in the Imperial Camp in Italy.

The 1ſt of October the Army halted at Lodi, and Preparations were made for eſtabliſhing a Magazine. Lieutenant Collonel St. Amour ſent an Account, that being advanc'd to Caſtel Leone he found that Poſt abandon'd; but that ſome Powder and Lead being left in it, he had caus'd it to be convey'd to the Camp. We were inform'd by Deſerters, that the Garriſon of Pizzighitone conſiſts of French, Spaniards, and Swiſs, to the Number of about 1000 Men. Upon the Advice receiv'd from General Daun of the State of the Siege of Pavia, it was reſolv'd the Prince of Saxe Gotha ſhould march with 5 Battallions, and the Regiment of Geſwind, to reinforce the Beſiegers, and forward the Reduction of that Place.

The 2d the Prince of Saxe Gotha march'd, and at the ſame Time we receiv'd an Account that Caſtel Trezzo had capitulated, and that the Spaniſh Garriſon were march'd out, but without Arms. Lieutenant Collonel St. Amour ſent Advice, that he was advanc'd with 250 Horſe towards Bardolano, in which were ſome of the Enemy. On Intelligence of ſome Alarm in the Valley of Aoſte, Order was given for 200 Horſe to march from Trino to Ivrea.

The 3d the Army encamp'd at Caſtione between Lodi and Pizzighitone. We had hardly begun to march, when the Marquis d'Andourne, his Royal Highneſs's Adjutant General, ſent by General Daun, arriv'd with the Capitulation of Pavia, conſiſting of about 20 Articles; purſuant to which the Garriſon, which was reckon'd to be 2000 Men, was to march out with Marks of Honour, and ſome Cannon; to be conducted, the French to Suza, the Spaniards to Valenza. The Importance of this Place, which is the Key of the Milaneze, and which might have made us loſe Time and Men, was a Motive for readily agreeing to this Capitulation, and by this Acquiſition the Ticino being free, and the Country cover'd on that ſide, it was reſolv'd without Delay to beſiege Pizzighitone, in Order to make our ſelves Maſters of the Adda. Whereupon P. Eugene ſent back the Marquis of Andourne to Count Daun, with Orders to leave in Pavia the Regiments of Kriechbaum and Saremberg, and that of Cuiraſſiers of Glockelsberg; to ſend the Regiment of Konigſeck, with 50 Horſe, towards Navara; to ſend back Lieutenant Collonel Eben with his Detachment to Vigevano till further Order; and to come himſelf with the reſt of the Troops towards Pizzighitone, as ſoon as he had caus'd the Artillery and other Things to be imbark'd as he was directed. An Expreſs was likewiſe ſent to the Prince of Saxe-Gotha, to return with his Troops. Towards Evening a Lieutenant of Huſſars, who brought in a Lieutenant Collonel and 2 other French Officers Priſoners, reported, that going with 16 Huſſars towards Soncino, he was informed by the Way, that there was near that Place a Party of the Enemy (which afterwards prov'd to be the Garriſon of Soncino, in Number about 100 Men, who deſign'd to retire towards Cremona; upon which he reſolv'd to try his Fortune, and coming up with thoſe Troops near a Village, he deſired to ſpeak with the commanding Officer, and told him that if he would yield himſelf and Men Priſoners of War, all their Lives ſhould be ſpar'd, but if they delay'd till the other Troops that were following him came up, they were to expect no Quarter; upon this the ſaid Garriſon ſurrendred, and was diſarm'd, and divided into ſeveral Companies, to be conducted to the Camp.

The 4th the Army encamp'd at Cavacurta, not far from Pizzighitone. Advice came from Count Daun, that he was buſy in ſending away the Artillery and Barks that had been demanded of him, and ſhould be ready to march the 5th with his Body of Troops; he added, that Lieutenant Collonel Eben had taken on the Po near Valenza 24 of the Enemy's Barks laden with Meal. Lieutenant Collonel St. Amour was order'd to poſt himſelf with his Detachment on the other ſide of the Adda, near Pizzighitone, to cut off the Communication between that Place and Cremona. According to a Liſt that we have receiv'd from Pavia, there were found in it above 4000 Sacks of Meal, and a conſiderable Train of Artillery with Ammunition requiſite. Our Horſe were order'd to make Faſcines, and 600 Foot were commanded to take Poſt in the Night near the Giera d'Adda of Pizzighitone.

The 5th the ſaid Order having been executed with all the Bravery that could be deſir'd, and almoſt without Loſs; the Enemy were oblig'd to retire into their Works on the other ſide of the Adda. The Duke of Savoy taking a View of that Poſt, receiv'd a Contuſion in the Arm by a Muſquet-Ball. We had Advice, that the Garriſon of the old Caſtle of Verue conſiſting of 55 Men, had ſurrendred themſelves Priſoners of War to the Count de Senantes; and by the taking of that Place the Po is open to Caſal. We had alſo Advice that the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel continued his March along the Po with his Body of Forces. 900 Foot and 200 Grenadiers were drawn out, to attack the inner Works before the Giera d'Adda.

The 6th that Attack quickly ſucceeding, notwithſtanding the Enemy made a great Fire, we poſſeſs'd our ſelves of the Town on that ſide, hardly loſing any Men, tho' that Place be well fortified, and has a good Ditch. We wait only for the Barks and Cannon, to lay a Bridge on the Adda and on the Po, in order to continuing the Attack on the other ſide. We had Advice, that the Garriſon of Lecco had capitulated. Count Daun had Order ſent him to halt with his Body of Troops, and come himſelf only to the Camp; and Collonel Heindel who commands in Pavia, had Order ſent him to lay a Bridge over the Po near Voghera. We had Intelligence that the Prince of Vaudemont and General Medavi were at Mantua, and that the Troops commanded by the latter were in the Seraglio.

The

The 7th our Men continued to work on the Battery that had been begun the Day before on this side of the Adda, against the Castle which is on the other side of Pizzighitone, waiting the Arrival of the Barks to perfect the Bridge. Directions were sent to the Hereditary Prince of Hesse-Cassel, who was with his Body of Forces at Revere, which way to continue his March. Repeated Orders were sent to Pavia, for laying a Bridge over the Po; and Count Daun was order'd to march with his Body of Men towards that Bridge, whither the Prince of Hesse-Darmstad is likewise to march with 3 Regiments of Dragoons, and the Prince of Saxe-Gotha with his Brigade. The Governour of Pavia has likewise Order to detach 2 Battallions of Kriechbaum; whence 'tis conjectur'd all these Troops are to pass the Po at Pavia, but on what Enterprize is not certainly known. Lieutenant Collonel St. Amour sent Advice, that the Enemy had abandon'd Bardolano, a Post that they had been fortifying above a Year; whereupon Order was sent him to put some Horse into it for the present, till it should be seen whether it might be necessary to put in a Garrison. Order was sent to Major General Seldliz, who is about Lecco, to draw together a Body of Men, and march towards the Fort of Fuentes, which 'tis hop'd will be reduc'd the sooner, because the Country is dispos'd to take Arms and second us. We have heard nothing from the Detachment that is gone towards Arona; but have receiv'd Advice from Piemont, that the Enemy are drawing together about Suza.

The 8th the Detachments that were order'd out Yesterday, under the Princes of Hesse-Darmstad and Saxe-Gotha, began to march this Morning: The Barks with all the Necessaries we expect, will arrive to Night.

From the Camp before Pizzighitone, Oct. 13.

The 16th at Night the Duke of Savoy receiving an Account by an Express from the Prince of Hesse Cessel, that he would pass the Po the 17th, order'd the Army to be ready to march in the Morning. We decamp'd, pass'd the Adda over a Bridge of Boats, and came to this Camp with Design to attack Pizzighitone.

Before we left the Camp of Cavacurta, in which we lay on the other side of the Adda, His Royal Highness receiv'd Advice from Prince Eugene, that he had taken the Town of Tortone, and hop'd to be soon Master of the Castle, otherwise he would have block'd it up, in Order to march to Alexandria to besiege it.

Yesterday his Royal Highness sent a Reinforcement of 4 Battallions and 3 Regiments of Horse to Prince Eugene, for the Enterprize on Alexandria; and in all Appearance we shall march that Way after we have taken Pizzighitone.

At our coming to this Camp, his Royal Highness order'd the Horse to make a good Number of Fascines; and between 9 and 10 at Night, the Trenches were open'd within 500 Paces of the Pallisades, his Royal Highness and all his Court being present. The Marquis de Lusingo was wounded near his Royal Highness. A Palatin Collonel was kill'd, with 2 Soldiers, and 8 wounded. The Guard consisted of 500 Foot and 50 Horse, with 600 Workmen; all commanded by the Baron de Regal Major General.

At the Time his Royal Highness was viewing the Approaches, to order the Attacks, the hereditary Prince of Hesse-Cassel arriv'd in the Camp, and after an Hour's Conference with his Royal Highness he went back again to his Troops, which arriv'd here to Day at Noon. The said Prince din'd with his Royal Highness, who afterwards took a Review of the said Troops, and found them well chosen Men, and in a very good Condition, notwithstanding the great March they have just made.

Some Letters from Milan dated Octob. 19. say Pizzighitone would have been already taken, were there not so many Savoyards in the Place, who would go out either mask'd or in Cover'd Waggons; and that this has retarded the Reduction of that Place.

'Tis advis'd that the Count de Colmenero has blown up the Magazine of Powder of Alexandria, and is retir'd with his Garrison to Final; of which we wait a Confirmation.

From the Paris Letter, dated Oct. 29.
